

This week, we're putting a spotlight on safety!

Last week, I had a bit of a scare when a cutting wheel exploded, sending fragments flying in my face.

I was really grateful to have my safety glasses on—even though they were a little dirty, they did an excellent job of protecting my eyes.

Before I tucked my safety glasses away, I thought it would be wise to give them a good cleaning first. I found an old pair of mismatched socks and used them to keep my freshly cleaned safety glasses safe for next time.

As always, let's remember that both eye and hand protection are super important when we're working on our classic car projects!
